Introduction

An international scientific-practical online conference on the topic "Teaching German in the age of digital technologies" will be held in cooperation with the Agency for Popularization of Foreign Language Learning under the Cabinet of Ministers and the Goethe Institute in Uzbekistan, based on the "Doch3" program of the German Academic Exchange Service (DAAD). passed. The conference discussed the most relevant and important scientific topics of modern science, new educational programs, as well as technical and scientific developments.

At the beginning of the conference, a number of works related to the field of science, teaching and development of foreign languages, in particular, the establishment of effective teaching of the German language in our country, new educational and methodological methods using innovative technologies Implementation of programs, technical possibilities, problems related to modern methodology and current issues were discussed.

At separate meetings of the branch, a number of lectures on scientific topics were heard by experts and referees from Germany, Uzbekistan and other countries on the main areas of the conference. These directions included issues such as German language teaching programs and digital technologies in the continuing education system, general and vocational German language teaching, and the strengthening of the teacher training system in this regard.

We know that there are many talented teachers who know the German language well in our country and they have achieved and are achieving many achievements. But in the following years, due to the lack of attention paid to the German language, it did not become popular among our youth. But our young people who have learned the German language have only benefited from their knowledge of this language and do not regret it at all.

Germany is an important trade and economic partner of Uzbekistan. During the years of independence, more than two hundred separate and joint enterprises were established by German entrepreneurs in our country.

The fact that the personnel who are growing up in our country do not have a high chance of knowing the German language and being able to converse freely in it is clearly manifested in various international meetings, conferences and seminars organized in our country, which is increasingly opening its gates to the world.

In our country, the work of training translators in the German language is also unsatisfactory. In this process, it is a consequence of not counting on the advanced experience of the world, and the fact that experienced translators and specialists working and studying abroad are not effectively used due to various subjective circumstances. In particular, in our higher education institutions, some teachers who have mastered a foreign language at an average level (V1) (based on the world standard, a specialist teaching a foreign language should have at least S1, S2 levels) in German how to understand that the lesson is going on? How can an "expert" who has not done practical translation himself, whose translations have not seen the world, inform others about the secrets of this craft?!

Based on this, it is necessary to further strengthen the teaching of the German language in our country. It should be introduced not only in the field of philology and linguistics, but also in the training of personnel in various fields. For example, the majority of tourists coming to our country are from German-speaking countries, they bring significant tourist currency investment to our republic. It is natural for tourists and guides to know the German language well, which increases their interest in our ancient cities, historical monuments, and our country in general.
